Think concrete. You’re thinking gray, dull and flat right? Think again.

Concrete gets designer treatments at Everything Concrete, Inc.

Think all concrete is gray, dull and flat? You haven’t seen the permanently stamped, colored and texturized projects being installed by John Metzinger at Everything Concrete. Driveways, patios, walks and floors are made to look like brick, stone, cobblestone, colored ceramic tile, marble and even planked wood. Metzinger uses Kuhlman concrete for these state-of-the-art applications.

Even existing floors and patios can be livened up by spraying, staining, or by using the latest technique — stenciling with the Spray-Rite™ architectural system. Although designer applications cost more, business is booming. “We’re getting orders for entire subdivisions. All the driveways and sidewalks in The Sanctuary will be stamped like slate,” explains Metzinger. “There’s absolutely no limit to the colors and textures available. This unlimited potential is exciting.”

“Three years ago we switched to Kuhlman from a competitor so that we could always provide our customers with top-quality concrete. Quality comes first – that’s why we depend on Kuhlman concrete. It’s durable, consistent and delivered on time. Kuhlman’s service is great and its people bend over backward to help us grow.”

Metzinger gets Symons concrete stamping and forming systems and materials through Kuhlman, too.

He founded a concrete-finishing business, Metzco Co. Home Services, and five years ago also opened Everything Concrete, specializing in stamped and stained concrete driveways. “The Symons Corp. sponsored me at their concrete school in Texas and I’ll send my key people again this year to learn the newest techniques,” he says. “We wouldn’t be where we are today without Symons and Kuhlman.”

Ever since bricklayer Adam Kuhlman went into the building supply business in 1901, his company has been customer-driven. Kuhlman combines history’s lessons with its philosophy for future growth and service to make its customers successful.
